
NEW DOLE FRAUDS ARE BARED IN SURVEY IN EAST BOSTON

BRIDE IS FOUND DEAD IN OFFICE OF DOCTOR

Physician, Unconscious, Nearby, Is Charged With Homicide

New York, May 11—Pretty Virginia Allen, 21-year-old bride, was found dead on an operating table in the office of Dr. Julius Phillips, Brooklyn physician, who was charged with homicide.

Pulver said they found evidence Mrs. Allen had died from an illegal operation.

Dr. Phillips was held in the prison ward of Brooklyn Hospital after police found him unconscious from an overdose of a sleeping draught.

Miss Allen, bride of Thomas Ball, Broadway booking agent, had been missing since Sunday, when she and her husband quarreled, police said, because she did not want a child.

Fall's identification of his bride's body was dramatic in the extreme, Capt. McDonald answered Ball's tinge at the doctor's office. The nervous visitor, hat in hand, asked:

"Is the doctor in?"

"What do you want to see the doctor for?"

"About my wife—I thought—maybe—she had come here."

Ball was brought in and questioned. He was asked to describe his wife. He was then led into the consultation room. The sheet covering the form on the operating table was lifted. With a short cover, Ball collapsed across his wife's body.

'Worthless' Gems in River

Greta Nissen, former Hollywood and stage actress, was hurried, according to reports from London, when she learned that a youth who robbed her apartment had tossed gems valued at $5,000 in the Thames river, thinking they were worthless. Miss Nissen recovered only a suitcase and two dresses of all the loot taken from her apartment. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

2 COUNCILLORS FIND A WAY TO STEAL AID

Welfare Chiefs Played for Laxity in Check of Jobless Lists

Further evidence of fraud in the public welfare was uncovered in East Boston today when City Councilors Robert Gardner Wilson and John I. Fitzgerald paid a surprise visit there to check on 25 names picked at random from the district dole list.

After three hours of probing, the city councilors had discovered that out of 10 cases checked, all but two were fraudulent.

The other eight persons were never heard of in the streets where they had told welfare officials they lived.

Frauds listed as legal residents of persons who have been obtaining dole illegally turned out to be lumber yards, vacant lots, railroad bridges, bakery shops and meat markets.

FRAUDS COVER 2 YEARS

In some cases where illegal addresses were found, record cards in possession of the councilors disclosed that the person listed at the address had been accepting aid for as long as two years.

Exasperated at their surprising discoveries, the two city councilors turned to newspapermen and up-to-date welfare department officials to check apparent failures to have periodic checks made of addresses given by those receiving aid.

Both councilors indicated that if they were to investigate the welfare department had possibly furnished false reports on cards that they had been given to investigate from time to time.

The first East Boston address visited was in Border st. There the councilors found a lumber yard, a luncheon and an abandoned cigar factory. No one could be found who had ever heard of a needy family living on the premises.

DOLE TALK NOT KNOWN

Next they went to a number in Maverick st. There they found a most modest two families who have lived next door for nine years to nothing of any dole recipients at the address.

The third address was in Hyatt st. Here the investigators were met by a woman who told them she had lived in the house for 23 years and had never shared it with any person who received municipal aid.

They can't understand how the welfare officials will explain these cases, commented Councilor Wilson. "And I can't see why the department's visitors did not discover these facts long ago."

League Court Protests Pile Up High

The petitions will be presented to the Senate on May 16. The girls here are Genevieve Kilmarin and Grace Schreck. The petitions came from all parts of the nation. President Roosevelt has repeatedly told congressional leaders that the court was not included in the administration's legislative calendar for action at this session. Democratic leaders are also opposed to dragging it out on the floor at this time.

2 DENY GUILT IN KIDNAPING

Two men, who police say abducted Ann Sheehy, 9, of Bracket st., Brighton near her home and left her in Somerville, with 24 hour hours later, pleaded not guilty today in Brighton district court to charges of attack on the United States into the League of Nations court.

They are John H. Mulvaney, 31, of Milton st., Arlington, and Michael A. McDonald, 40, of Hatchinson st., Cambridge. Police say the girl identified the pair as the men who invited her to take a ride in a truck.

BANKER TELLS OF MULLONEY NOTE DEALS

V. M. Pelletier Describes Business With Accused Bank Head

Victor M. Pelletier, of the brokerage firm of Hornblower & Weeks, a brother of the late District Attorney, Joseph C. Pelletier, of Suffolk county, told Judge Hugh D. McLaughlin, and a jury, in U. S. court today his business dealings with Daniel C. Mulloney, indicted president of the closed Federal National Bank.

This business consisted of arranging for the placing of Mulloney's notes, in assisting him in borrowing from different banks, and renewal of notes.

Pelletier said he would have had nothing to do with the Mulloney notes unless he was satisfied they were good. All his business with Mulloney, he said, was in the interest of the firm of Hornblower & Weeks, with which he has been connected for 20 years.

Defense Atty. Maurice C. Taylor questioned Pelletier to show that Mulloney was honest in his dealings with Hornblower & Weeks, and would not have been considered if his probity was questionable.

Pelletier told of his transactions with Mulloney in buying and selling stock, and placing of loans for him with different banks, notably one of $25,000 with the Ware Savings Bank at Ware, Mass., in 1931.

Solution Near in "Perfect Conan Doyle" Mystery

By International News Service
Lorient, France, May 11.—Charles Conan Doyle, the author of the "Perfect Conan Doyle" mystery, is believed to have been killed in a motor car crash near Lorient, France, today, according to police reports.

The slain woman's husband, Michel, 23, one of the most important breeders of silver foxes in Europe, was summoned before the court for questioning today. It is believed he may be able to clear up some of the mystifying new angles in the murder.

Georgette Deglave, typist Henri's girl of good family, married Henri Dec 10, last. His father is the Lorient district prosecutor, and his uncle, Deputy Philippe Henric, was one of the most active officials in making revelations of the $40,000,000 St. Louis scandal.

Young Henric told police that he went home Tuesday and found his bride dead on the floor of their new home, her hand clutching the telephone receiver. The latest disclosed there were five carbide bullets in her body.

It was revealed that the marriage of the couple resulted from an advertisement in a matrimonial paper and that the girl had recently written her mother complaining she was being badly treated. It was also disclosed that the bride had a dowry of 100,000 francs and that on April 4 her husband had insured her for 200,000 francs with a clause in the policy to cover death by violence.

MILLEN FABER VAN AMBURGH IS ON STAND IN DRAMATIC NEEDHAM TRIAL

Identifies Weapons, Bombs, Dynamite and Masks; Bullets Are Put in Evidence for Jury

By WILLIAM CONWAY

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Needham Courthouse, May 11—Guns and bullets and their relation to each other and to murder and robbery at the Needham Trust Co. were explained by the state's final witness in testimony today.

He was white-haired Capt. Charles J. Van Amburgh, veteran ballistics expert for Massachusetts. He described tests that he made with guns found in the effects of Merton Milten, and finally gave as his expert opinion that death-dealing bullets at Needham were fired from those weapons.

Van Amburgh Identifies Guns and Bullets

Court opened at 10:32 a. m. Capt. Charles J. Van Amburgh, state police ballistics expert, was recalled to the stand by Asst. Dist. Atty. George W. Arbuckle. He identified a 22 caliber bullet which was taken from him on February 2 by Officer Charles of Boston police.

Capt. Van Amburgh also identified a 45 caliber bullet given him by Chief Billie of Needham and a 45 caliber shell and a 22 caliber shell given him by Chief Sullivan of Norwood on February 8.

He also identified the battery and the numerous articles taken from the Britney a. garage. All have been in his possession since then.

In addition to the articles in court, Capt. Van Amburgh stated he personally removed 200 slices of dynamite and caps to a safe place in Quincy.

Van Amburgh identified the sub-machine gun and five 22 caliber Woodmen pistols turned over to him by Lieut. Stokes. He also identified a machine gun turned over to him by Lieut. Stokes and four shotguns turned over to him by Lieut. Stokes and Fleming.

Two More Masks And Other Weapons

Then the black suitcase brought back from Washington by Lieut. Stokes was produced and Capt. Van Amburgh identified each article as having been in his possession since their return. Among the articles was a drum used on a Thompson sub-machine gun which was half filled with cartridges.

Capt. Van Amburgh rattled the

Norma Friend Hears Trial

Dedham Courthouse, May 11—Judge Frankland Miles of Roxbury court at whose wedding a decade ago Norma Brighton Milten was a flower girl, dropped into the Milten-Faber trial to see the state close its case.

Norma happened into the room of flower girl because her father, Rev. Norman Friend, was officiating at the wedding ceremony at Judge Miles' wedding.

taking all the firearms that were turned over to him and examining carefully their condition and cleanliness and use.

He said he fired off the guns for his own testing and then the photographs of the tested shells and bullets.

As he talked the state ballistics expert fingered each type of gun in its relation to the bullet shells he found. Neither the machine gun, the shotgun nor the pistol was given to the jurors, however for their personal use. They glanced at the firearms from their seats in the box to the witness stand where they were placed on the ledge.

McLeod Bullet Given
Into Jurors' Hands

Capt. Van Amburgh produced three enlarged photographs of the "McLeod bullet" which, he explained, was the bullet taken from the body of Patrolman McLeod.

On each of the photographs he pointed out distinctive markings. On each of the photographs another photograph was superimposed. This, he explained, was a photograph of the standard bullet he used for comparison.

Spectators craned their necks to get a look at the photographs of the "McLeod bullet." Asst. Dist. Atty. Arbuckle handed Foreman of the Jury Michael Doherty the original bullet. It was passed around the jury for comparison with the photographs.

"The bullet with the mutilated head is the photograph of the McLeod bullet," Capt. Van Amburgh told the jury.

As each photograph was submitted, Capt. Van Amburgh stepped from the witness stand and stood in front of the jury. He pointed out the markings on the bullets with a pencil.

Three minutes after court reconvened, Asst. Dist. Atty. Arbuckle concluded his direct examination of the ballistics expert. He was taken to the cross-examination by Atty. Harvey.

Capt. Van Amburgh said he has known about Thompson sub-machine guns since they were introduced in 1921. The gun marked as an exhibit, he testified, was a 1928 model.

He admitted that the bullets used in the sub-machine gun were used in a 45-caliber automatic. He made his tests for velocity and penetration at an average distance of 100 feet, he said.

Q—In reference to this machine gun, it is impossible to purchase these guns indiscriminately? A—We are told that it is difficult.

Q—Isn't it the fact that before these guns are legally sold permission must be granted by the Department of Justice? A—I am not sure of that.

Q—Do you know that there are about 1000 of these guns unaccounted for in this country? A—I am not sure.

Q—They are in the hands of the police and the government doesn't know where they are? A—I have heard that, but I have no knowledge of the number.

Q—You said 45-caliber shells were turned over to you supposed to have been picked up in the back and the bullets taken from McLeod's body. Can you tell which shell that bullet was fired from? A—it is impossible to tell which shell the bullet came from.

Q—You say the bullet came from the machine gun? A—Yes.

Q—Is it possible to tell which shell the bullet found in the clothing came from? A—It is impossible to tell.

Q—You testified that the bullet found in McLeod's body came from the machine gun. You base your opinion of the markings and abrasions you found? A—That's correct.

Another recess was declared at that point.

SCOTS DECLINE $25,000 BID

By International News Service, Inverness, Scotland, May 11—What—sell the famous Loch Ness monster to America?

The villagers who dwell along the shores of Loch Ness declined the offer, then grew indignant today when told that director Dr. W. R. Blair of the Bronx Zoo in New York had offered $25,000 to any man who would capture the beast and transport it to the United States.

"No more than we would sell our Majesty, King George, himself," was one angry comment.

The Loch Ness monster, Americans may as well know now, is a distinctively home-bred product—some people say of Scotch imagination—and if captured will never be allowed to leave British shores.

When you lose something, advertise that loss in the Lost and Found columns of the American and Advertiser and have their huge combined circulation of over 750,000 help you search for it.

GLORIA TO FILE SUIT SOON MEET HERE

Chicago, May 11 (INS)—Gloria Swanson will file suit for divorce against her husband, Michael Farmer, in a Los Angeles court within a week or ten days, she said today.

The motion picture star added: "Mr. Farmer, I hear, is just about to start on a cruise around the world, the lucky dog. He just got back from a Norway fishing trip. I don't know just which direction he will go, but he starts, I think, from somewhere on the Mediterranean."

Miss Swanson added: "My lawyer in Los Angeles will file the suit for divorce against Mr. Farmer some time within the next week or 10 days. He is arranging it now."

The charge, Miss Swanson announced, will be incompetency. She said she is finding it necessary "to work to support my children, while Farmer finds it necessary to fish and to cruise."

Herriot Defies 'Young Turk' Foes

Geneva, May 11 (AP)—Edouard Herriot defied a flat challenge to the "Young Turks" to throw him out as chief of the Radical Socialists, France's dominant political group, at the opening of the party congress today.

"I will quit the presidency of the party rather than quit the Cabinet," Herriot declared in a secret session of Radical Socialist leaders.

With all boxes taken for the second and Newton County Hosiery show, financial success and substantial benefits to the Mayor's Relief Fund and the Y. W. C. A. today seem assured.

Silver Grey Claymore Worsteds

These kinglys rarely sell under $35.
Their hand needlework, firm weave, and good taste all belong a notch higher than our Birthday price. Try one on

Today and tomorrow! De Luxe bench-tailored, Gallowsays $35

Judged by every test of quality, these suits might have come direct from the hands of a custom tailor. They fit faultlessly. Enjoy their luxury at a very modest outlay, during our Birthday Celebration!

This is an invitation to shrewd, "show me" buyers. We've a new group of $25 two trouser suits we'd like them to meet.
They were made-to-order for men who are particular about appearance—but are too busy to be particular about the hard wear they give a suit. They are Triple-Crown Saxony!

So much has already been said for these magnificent woolsens, that it seems folly for us to say more. Their brisk, keen style—their easy drape—and their rugged wearing quality have long placed them in the forefront of better fabrics. In our opinion, they are the most striking two-trouser-suit values we have ever presented at $25. • • We've purposely kept these suits under cover—to headline them during our Birthday Party.
They'll give "show me" buyers a dramatic demonstration of how little it costs to dress well. Come and see!

Insull Quits Edison When G. E. Presidency Is Given Another

(If Edison was a genius, so was Insull. One could manipulate electro-magnetic waves. The other could make million-dollar loans blossom where before was nothing but blank stares. Today's instalment of the Life of Insull tells of the close association of two of the most interesting men of their generation.)

CHAPTER SIX
Insull and Edison were a pair—each the complement of the other. It took the two of them, as a team, to get the results sought—especially in those early days. Edison could do tricks in a laboratory. Insull could change the trick into a great expanding industry. Insull had one kind of genius, Edison another.

Edison sometimes professed amused alarm at Insull's high-powered intellect. Once he said: "Well, Sammy, if it comes to worst, you are a good shorthand writer and I can make a living as a telegrapher."

Insull, who had started as an office boy and had become a stenographer and bookkeeper, was now embarked on one of the most spectacular careers in salesmanship the world has ever seen. What he did first for Edison he was later to do for himself on a fantastically magnified scale.

Four nights out of seven Insull busied himself at the galvanometer. Though he never thought that there are limits to endurance, exhaustion sometimes sent him to sleep at his post. A friendly policeman would wake him up by giving the soles of his shoes a tap with his nightstick so that he could take the next reading.

Thus Insull became interested in loss percentages, the elimination of waste. In later life he would not hesitate a moment to discard costly machinery if, by replacing it, he could show an ultimate saving.

He was helping, too, in the advertising work and in that "propaganda" publicity whose purpose is not direct advertising but the cultivation of "good will"—free publicity. At the crest of his power Insull was said that he knew how to get as much publicity for nothing as his advertising departments got by buying cash. For he was a newsmonger. He would use statements that "had to be printed."

One of the problems that faced Edison and Insull was that of public fear. People thought electricity was dangerous to use. They thought they might be accidentally electrocuted or that their homes would turn down. Insull was always arranging spectacular demonstrations to prove that the current was safe. He invited the timid to come to the West st. station in New York and watch one of the employees submit himself to the current and come through unharmed. He suggested that they sample a shock themselves. Later, he was to offer them a different sample—when his "empire" was crumbling and falling.

Believed in Central Power Station Plant
One important opinion formed by Insull while he was still working for Edison was about the correct way of selling electricity. He believed in the central station plant, instead of the establishment of separate plants for individual customers. For a faraway mine or for some big hotel or factory outside the zone of the central plant, they would install a separate system. Both Insull and Edison agreed that the real future of the electrical business must be in delivering the current to the customer wherever he might be.

One of Insull's first lessons in the art of dealing with politicians came to him while he was still working with Edison. It happened that due to rapidly increasing business, the Fourth street plant was overcrowded, so that it became desirable to store some cables on the sidewalk.

This required a permit—and Tammany was running New York. So Insull had to "see" the Tammany district leader. Not, however, with a checkbook, but with John.

Moves and Starts Long Fatal Career
"Go ahead and put what you want on the sidewalk," the district leader said. "And when I send a man to get with a note—give him a job."

Insull handed out the jobs. But he led a string to them. The day after a man was hired he was asked to "bring that bit of iron over here." The bit of iron weighed half a ton or so. The new job holder always failed. Then a phenomenon, strong man of the company would lift the burden easily and the man who had been hired a day before was discharged. Usually he was so ashamed that he wouldn't even complain and the Tammany leader revolved the sidewalk permit. So Edison and Insull moved their plant to Schenectady, where there was elbow room.

To Schenectady? What this was going to mean to Insull he could not have guessed at that time. It was to mean the beginning of his long association with Edison. And it was to mean the beginning of his career in Chicago—fatal career.

Under Insull's management the new plant in Schenectady grew until seven thousands of men were employed. This was fine—only it called for more and more capital. Mergers were proposed and made. The Electric Tube Co. came in. Two Edison companies joined. The new corporation, with a capital of $12,000,000, was called the Edison General Electric Co. Insull was second vice-president.

Still later the corporation was made bigger and its name was made shorter—just General Electric. Insull wanted to be president. But C. A. Coffin got the job. Not only got it, but got it on the sly of Edison himself. "That hurt!" Not that it broke the friendship between Edison and Insull, which nothing could do—but it hurt because it showed that Edison's faith was wavering.

Did it mean that Edison, long before anybody else in the world, sensed what was wrong—unreliable—in Insull?

The story is that Edison was beginning to get a little bit nervous about Insull's financial policy. Insull was always planning to spend more money than was in sight—never doubting that he would be able to get it when the time of necessity arrived. He was a conservative. With Coffin at the Edison's helm, Edison's sense of dismally all worry and go ahead comfortably with his inventions. To Edison the making of money was second in importance. To Insull it was first.

Another thing, Insull was drawing a salary of $50,000 a year. This was very high for those days. It was true that Insull had produced results to justify it, but it may have been that Edison feared the results would not continue to justify it.

In any event, when Insull was made second vice president of General Electric it took him no time at all to decide against holding the job. He at once called Coffin.

"I shall be glad to stay as long as you really need me," he said. "But I do not want the position. Let me know, please, as soon as you can conveniently accept my resignation."

When it was accepted, he moved forward—to Chicago.

BRITAIN WANTS WORLD PARLEY ON DEBTS

London, May 11—Great Britain would welcome a world conference summoned by President Roosevelt for a final solution of the problem of intergovernmental debts.

International News Service was informed in highest official quarters this afternoon that the British government believes the "vital question of foreign debts is so interwoven with other factors of the world economic situation that only international action in concert can achieve a satisfactory all-round settlement."

While Great Britain is awaiting the formal statement President Roosevelt is expected to make shortly on the foreign debt question, International News Service is authorized to state that the British government has not changed its stand.

That is that any adjustment calling for transfers of major payments to the United States on account of the British debt to the United States will be opposed for the reasons given in the British notes of 1932.

Consequently the matter of the British budget surplus is regarded as outside the argument.

At the foreign office it is strongly felt that British arguments and warnings against the dangers of such transfers have been borne out since 1932. Therefore, it is argued, it has become essential that the entire problem be approached and solved by all concerned on a common basis to avoid what in the British mind, are the "disastrous" effects of huge debt payments.

Inaction Stirs Rep. McLeod

By Universal Service
Washington, May 11.—Sharp criticism of the House rules committee for its refusal to act on the resolution to bring the McLeod bill to the floor was made today by Rep. McLeod (R.) of Michigan, author of the measure, to pay off in full the depositors of closed banks.

The resolution has been before the committee, headed by Rep. Backlund (D.) of Alabama, for three weeks, McLeod said.

"This manner of burying legislation is not fair. This is a bill that is wanted by a majority of the members of the House, but just because it is not wanted by the leaders of the majority party. It is stuck in a pigeon hole."

Completion of a petition to discharge the resolution from its consideration was nearer realization today. Only 31 names are lacking to force a vote May 28. The chairman of the House education committee, Rep. Douglas (D.) of Massachusetts, was the latest signer.

There is the classified page today and not so much as that which is in the hands of the public. It is a bill that is wanted by a majority of the members of the House, but just because it is not wanted by the leaders of the majority party. It is stuck in a pigeon hole."

They are Mrs. Felsa Henry, of Boston ave., Somerville; Raymond Gould, of Parker st., Quincy; and Peter Bowman, of Winchester st., Medford.

Woman Sought in Kidnap

nettle about 30 years old and fairly well dressed, fell into a police dragnet early this morning along with six other persons, who also were questioned.

After apparently examining the woman at some length, Capt. Stenaland, sheriff's office extortion expert, and a figure behind the solution of a number of other kidnaping cases here, said:

"It looks bad, boys! I think we have something. It is possible that we will have this solved within a few days."

The woman was taken into custody by three police homicide officers in ferreting out haunts of the underworld. She was turned over to the sheriff and district attorney's offices for examination, but the officers who questioned her declined to disclose any information.

Significantly it came several hours after Ernest E. Noon, lawyer for the kidnaped oil millionaire, upon returning from a 30-minute trip, said at his offices he had obtained "very important information, which may lead to the identification of the kidnapers."

Whether there was a connection between the woman and his statement remained unexplained.

As the hours passed without direct word, a grief-stricken and invalid wife and four children appealed to the abductors to spare the husband and father from any harm and expressed willingness to pay any sum for his freedom.

"I beg you not to harm my husband and father or my four children," said the appeal issued by Mrs. Gettle.

James P. Wolf told the story today of the kidnaping of Gettle from his Arcadia estate last midnight while entertaining an overnight party.

"I thought the whole affair was just another prank of Bill. Bill and I were at the bar. We were chatting and joking."

"Suddenly I felt a poke in the back and saw a second man with a handkerchief over his face stick a revolver at Bill."

"In a voice barely a whisper they order: 'Stick on up, Bill, and I raised our arms above our heads. Then they motioned us to leave the recreation room and walk beyond the swimming pool."

"As we neared the wall surrounding the estate—it was pitch dark—we were halted for a moment. Then our hands were bound with our ties. Mine were tied behind my back."

"I heard Bill moving up the ladder and I'm sure one of the men was behind him. I was still on the ground. I heard Bill apparently stumble and then a third man he dropped to the other side."

"Just as Bill hit I heard him

Taking issue with George G. Zerkel, new chairman of the Republican State committee, in his call to the rank and file of the G. O. Cook today indicated that he may run as an independent, in opposition to the convention choice for governor.

Discharge or resignation of Roy M. Chisham, head of the relief division of the ERA, and a general shakeup in officials of that government bureau, is scheduled to take place shortly, it was reported today.

Chisham has been the storm center of numerous criticisms as a result of his case system plan for giving relief to the needy. Chisham is an appointee of the present ERA director, Joseph P. Casey.

ROBLES KIDNAP CAR FOUND

By International News Service
Tucson, Ariz., May 11.—Discovery of a dilapidated automobile used by the kidnapers when they seized little June Robles, six-year-old heiress, as she was leaving school 15 days ago, was the highlight in a rapid succession of sensational developments today.

The abandoned car was found in an isolated cactus-studded arroyo near Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, by Mexican police. Detectives described the automobile as the one used in driving the child across the border as the abductors were forced to flee before the greatest man-hunt ever organized in the southwest.

The automobile was deserted several days ago. Police refused to disclose to whom the license plates were issued.

Other disclosures were:

1.—The Mexican Cordada, a law enforcement body similar to the Texas Rangers of pioneer days, ordered several hundred armed men, to make a thorough search of western Sonora. The Cordada has just finished searching the eastern part of the state.

2.—June's father, Fernando Robles, has issued a second appeal to the kidnapers, declaring he could raise only $10,000 ransom money. He also asserted, the donors of the $10,000 emphatically stated that money must not be paid except upon delivery of the child at the time of payment. He refused to advance the ransom money, although it is understood the money was given him by the grandfather, Bernabe Robles, millionaire cattle rancher.

3.—Police revealed the kidnapers had submitted the child's mother to the five questions propounded by the father in order to avoid a hook. The replies, all of which were to childish queries, were correct.

ATLANTIC BANK SUELED FOR $100 MILLION

lapse of Atlantic, one of the oldest and most respected institutions, a panic might ensue that would be disastrous to sound banks, impossible in normal times.

First National and National Shawmut, the two largest banks in Boston and among the most formidable in the country, collaborated with the State Street Trust Company and other important institutions and they determined to save the situation, if possible.

50 Million Assets
Protect Depositors
First National agreed to take over the $50,000,000 of assets of Atlantic, to protect the depositors against the loss of a penny to them and to liquidate the assets in orderly manner, without any of the depreciation value of the assets that would result from the future improvement of the bank's condition generally.

The other banks agreed to share with First National only the amount that would result from the liquidation, although the loss would be shared.

The liquidation of Atlantic was preceded with a meeting of the directors of the banks, and the assets of Atlantic were placed under the supervision of Philip Stetson of First National.

First National has now liquidated about $25,000,000, or one-half of the assets secured from Atlantic National. It is in consequence of First National's liquidation of these assets and it is alleged to be the consequence of what it has found in the investigation and disposal of these assets that the suit was brought to liquidate the directors of the bank.

Atlantic National was a growth of the combination of the First Atlantic and the Commonwealth Trust Co. As its business grew phenomenally, it was decided to take over the Beacon Trust Co., and by this merger its deposits rose to the extent of $140,000,000.

Atlantic had dealt almost exclusively in commercial paper, such as unsecured loans or loans on stock and bonds. Beacon Trust assets were largely in real estate loans, which Beacon had acquired by its own efforts and by its prior assumption of the Liberty Trust Co.

Beacon Trust, when acquired by Atlantic, had about $25,000,000 of loans and had a large number of deposits. It had $40,000,000 of deposits included among the real estate were several branch bank buildings. There were also several subsidiaries operating in Beacon which Atlantic took over.

In a recent momentous decision, Judge John J. Burns ruled in Superior Court that the officers and managers of Beacon Participated in the liquidation of Beacon Trust, which was made a part of the liquidation of Beacon Trust, which was made a part of the liquidation of Beacon Trust.

The suit alleges that the directors of Atlantic, who were negligent in examining the conditions of the Beacon Trust Co. and that they, therefore, were responsible for the "acts of mismanagement" which wrecked the Atlantic.

The resultant losses were estimated to be a vast amount, at the time impossible of definite ascertainment. Atlantic National, at its zenith, had $140,000,000 of deposits and was exceeded in its stature only by First National and National Shawmut.

Miss Bergner in 'Melo,' at Fine Arts

By HARRIS MORGAN
From success abroad comes "Melo" to the screen at the Fine Arts, for a fine contrast of the Elizabethan Bergner of "Catherine the Great" to the Elizabethan Bergner of this earlier Franco-German production. Fine as she was in the English film, she is much superior in the current movie, which happens to be the one that inspired the contrast with the British studios.

"Melo" is a slow-moving picture, being a study in souls as much as in human activity. There is rather an odd combination of Jewish genius in this film, worth noting, as it brings out the extraordinary angle of genius for which the race is famous. The director, the author, Paul Canner, the director, Miss Bergner, the star, and the producers, all outstanding in their fields of effort, combine to give this picture close among movies of its type. Because of the skill of these four personalities, it commands attention as a rich psychological study in the cinema.

The dialogue is German, of course, that being the native tongue of Miss Bergner and her English husband. There are English captions. Miss Bergner is cast as the wife of an orchestra conductor, but her husband is a concert artist with whom time will tell deeply in love.

It's a queer triangle, for the wife discovers she loves both her husband and the conductor, and cannot bring herself to break from her husband, nor to end her affair with his rival, the conductor, who makes of course for sympathy.

Best to this writer is the opportunity to see again the expert Miss Bergner. She is utterly different from actresses with whom American audiences are acquainted, not only in her own but depending upon art and a remarkable voice to shade her character into reality or beauty. This department loved, too, the interview music, far better than any dialogue to develop the theme, and more pleasurable than human voice could ever be. In addition, Manager Kraska has a most enjoyable group of "shorts" on his new program.

Fabien Sevitzyk Again Chosen to Lead People's Symphony

By MOSES SMITH
Fabien Sevitzyk has been re-elected as conductor of the People's Symphony Orchestra of Boston, although no authoritative announcement has yet been made in this respect by either the Musicians' Union or Mr. Sevitzyk himself. The writer has verified the fact of Mr. Sevitzyk's reappointment beyond question.

The good news for the hundreds of faithful and enthusiastic devotees of the People's Orchestra during the season just past, for it means that the Orchestra will continue in the hands of an able conductor under which it has made extraordinary progress in a period of about seven months. Such progress, indeed, that it could hardly be recognized as the People's Symphony Orchestra of the past.

Taking over the reins of the People's last fall, when its future was most uncertain, Sevitzyk had announced a pretentious repertoire which included many difficult symphonic works never previously played by the orchestra. Among these were compositions by Beethoven and Strauss which many of us believed could be played effectively only by a virtuoso orchestra. Mr. Sevitzyk and his able musicians, whom he had drilled with remarkable effectiveness, proved that we were wrong.

Under Sevitzyk's baton, the People's Orchestra made excursions into choral music for the first time, being assisted by Sevitzyk's own vocal ensemble in works like Mozart's Requiem, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and Shostakovich's America. The latter was one of a series of compositions by American composers, one or more of which was placed on almost every program. Mr. Sevitzyk also made good, at least in part, his promise to feature a young American soloist on each program.

In a cursory review, omitting most of the details, it is possible only to emphasize the important thing—that Sevitzyk has made a responsive symphonic organization out of the People's, and that he has made it possible for the public of this orchestra, to hear vitally performed symphonic music. It is scarcely necessary to point out that the comparatively low admission charges to the public and the cooperative nature of the People's Symphony concerts have always caused this institution to be recognized as an important force for musical education in the community. In this sense, too, it has been regarded as a preparatory school, rather than a rival of the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Of equally vital importance, in a different direction, is the effect Sevitzyk has had on the personnel of the orchestra itself. Despite difficult financial problems the men have stood loyally by their conductor, giving their best efforts and making great sacrifices in doing so. They have been impelled by their admiration for his dynamic personality and driving will power, by his authoritative musicianship and convincing artistry, and by his apparently limitless capacity for work. As a result, when the men were recently given for the first time some voice in the selection of a conductor for the following season, there was an almost unhesitating unanimity in favor of Sevitzyk.

This is not a eulogy. Sevitzyk has faults, at least on the orchestra. But they are negligible before the fact of the huge accomplishment of the past season. No information is yet attainable as to the plans and repertoire for next season. But judging from the past year, it will contain many a surprise.

CAROLE LOMBARD

B. U. Professor Warns of Sudden Hard Exercise

Men who were athletes in their younger days and who suddenly resume exercising in a vigorous way often kill themselves through their good intentions. It was warned today by Dr. Walter L. Mondell, professor of pathology at Boston University school of medicine. The physician said he reported the common trend that athletes considered from 10 years ago.

"On the contrary," he said, "the facts point to greater longevity in athletes than in non-athletes." He pointed out that in recent study made for an insurance company, there were 1200 deaths among athletes as against 4500 among non-athletes.

Marjorie Ward of Magnolia has entered the contest in which a 'Miss Twentieth Century' is to be chosen. Carole Lombard is ranked by film folk as a typical 'Twentieth Century' girl.

Announcement was made by Thomas H. Buckley of Abington today that he would be a candidate for state auditor to succeed State Auditor Francis X. Hurley. The candidate is the present first deputy state auditor.

"I have served as first deputy auditor of the Commonwealth since January, 1933," he said. "During that time I have obtained a knowledge of the work of the office of auditor which I believe will aid in future conduct of the office."

Buckley has been an active Democrat for many years. He has been a member of the Democratic State committee since 1919.

SOX INFILTRATED SIEVE FOR SCORES

By Bill Grimes

After watching the Red Sox go through the ritual of playing ball since the opening of the season, the writer is convinced they are either handicapped by an overabundance of conceit or they have served enough hitches in the army.

to be past master in the art of soldiering.

For the third time this season they kicked away a six run lead. Since the opening game with the Washington Senators, the Red Sox have not got the pitching. At times the territory have measured up to major league brand but for the most part they have been woefully weak.

It must be admitted, however, that the pitchers have not been tendered major league support. The Red Sox infield has bobbled in the punches many times, but never was that so evident as in the second game, when errors by Billy Werber and Bill Casell handed Cleveland no less than seven of its 11 runs.

RUBE FITCHES WELL

Rube Waberg pitched well enough yesterday to have any ball game but his infield collapsed.

RUBE PITCHES WELL.
Rube Walberg pitched well enough yesterday to win about any ball game but his infield collapsed, and he went to the showers in the 6th and then Jack Welch simply went through the motions of tossing 'em up for less than one inning. Then he was yanked in favor of Bob Welland, who was nicked for three runs and the old ball game in the 8th inning, when Joe Vosmik dropped one over the left field fence, with two on.

Any club that tosses away a six run lead, acquired in the first inning, is open for criticism. True, the Sox scored their half dozen runs on three hits, but even so, a good ball club would have been able to protect such an advantage.

Bill Cissell slunked on an easy high hopper grounder, with two

Down in the 5th, and before the Indians had been retired, Ben Knickerbocker doubled and Earl Averill slapped a home run into the right field stands, to score a trio of runs.

After the Red Sox had come back with two runs in their half of the same inning, Hal Trosky singled and Sammy Hale trifled double into right field, putting a man on third and second. Trosky scored while Billy Werber was retiring Roy Spencer but after Kamm had fouled out Werber dropped Winegarner's high infield fly, allowing Hale to go across with another run. Then Dutch Halland lined a triple to right, tallying Winegarner.

3 to 6, there was a mix up at second base on a ball hit to Max Bishop, whose throw to Cissell was either wide or the mark or bobbled by the receiver, with a double play which would have retired the side, in sight.

Something went wrong. The ball got away from Cissell, who tripped and fell over the bag, allowing Averill and Trosky to cross the plate.

Lesson I—Vocabulary and Work Bench

The primary object of this course in model plane building and flying is to give every boy and girl an opportunity to construct model planes under proper guidance and counsel, and to teach them the art of flying these craft in competition for valuable awards.

Most any boy and girl can learn to build models and fly them in a short period of time.
It is a common mistake to think that model building is a difficult task. It is not. It is a simple matter of following instructions and using the proper tools. The model builder will find that the work is both interesting and educational. The model builder will also find that the work is a good way to spend his spare time.

Antoinette Ireni

and every boy and every girl use the proper tools and find that the work is a good way to spend his spare time.

This is an important detail for you will find it most handy when you begin to accumulate models and materials. The often times extend just a bit over the length and breadth of the drawing. The shoving will eliminate the possibility of damage to material or completed models.

By following the illustration of this first lesson in our Junior Birdmen model builders' course for beginners you should have a very fine place to work on.
The second lesson in our course will be published next week. It will discuss the various tools used in model plane construction and their uses.

Junior Birdmen members whose pictures are printed today are:
Antoinette Ireni, 11, of 15 Haverhill, Cambridge, and Frank J. Workman, 14, of 15 Lowe st., Peabody.

GIRLS READY ON $46 PER BUT BOYS! Ship Stowaway to Be Deported

Girls think $46 a week is enough to get married on but boys believe $2500 would be a better average to keep a wife in the style to which she is accustomed.
That's the feature of a questionnaire given to girls and boys connected with the East Parish Universal Church, Malden. The Rev.
Seth Rogers Brooks, pastor, conducted the questionnaire in an effort to learn how young people feel about their own problems.
The girls voted their estimate on what is needed for an average wedding from $1800 to $2000.
The boys voted $46 to $500.
The girls voted in 3 to 1 majority as not opposed to drinking and smoking by their spouses.
The boys seem to be far more religious than the young ladies. The former voted 3 to 1 to be married.

ported to his native country. Pavlovich told customs officials hoped to secure work in this country.

This specially designed model plane builders' work bench has shelving instead of drawers. This kind is more suitable for junior aviation work as it allows for easy access to materials and models. If possible Junior Birdmen should get this kind of a bench. If they are unable to do so some kind of bench should be used.

CITICORP CLUB INTERESTING IN ADVERTISING

Newspapers Found to Stock market headlines. To be sure, the market is not without half-truths. The attitude of the average trader is that there just can't be any good news. At the risk of repeating what we have said before, we want to say that the market is not without half-truths. The attitude of the average trader is that there just can't be any good news. For the regular reader who delights in technical study there was ever a time like the present in which the action of the market was so interesting. The individuals are not yet out of the market. The wave of fear which swept over the share exchanges due to the good prospects regulation now passed by the Senate this week will probably lift when the first returns are in. For that reason, the way with markets. In fear and trembling they complete what they consider untoward events. When, when possible, they are suddenly relieved by all hands that preliminary indications point to proceed to go, immediately trading sentiment swings in the other direction and a violent rally follows.
